Course Description

A chronological examination of art and architecture (with some reference to the other arts) in relation to significant historical and cultural events from about 1300 to about 1800.

Prerequisites &/or Co-requisites

None

Objectives of the Course

This course will examine the role of visual culture in the construction of identity across various social spheres in Europe. Covering the period c. 1300-1800, we will look at art production in a variety of media (including painting, print, sculpture, and architecture) in relation to its historical and social contexts. In addition to introducing some of the major artistic trends and figures of the era, we will explore the ways in which some key topics – including the changing status of the artist, constructions of gender, race, sexuality, representations of power, evolving networks of commerce, travel, and intellectual exchange – appear at different times and in different geographical areas throughout the period under consideration.

Upon completion of the course, students should be able to describe and analyze works of art, and discuss the relationships between visual culture and its socio-historical contexts. Students should also be able to identify and compare various formal styles, as well as understand and employ some of the critical methods of art history.

Textbooks and Required Readings

The required readings for this course will be assembled as a course pack and links to some articles and online resources will be posted to D2L.

If you do not write this test on Tuesday, April 11th, a mark of zero will be recorded for this portion of your overall grade.

Writing/Plagiarism

Writing skills are not exclusive to English courses and, in fact, should cross all disciplines. The University supports the belief that throughout their University careers, students should be taught how to write well so that when they graduate their writing abilities will be far above the minimal standards required at entrance. Consistent with this belief, students are expected to do a substantial amount of writing in their University courses and, where appropriate, members of faculty can and should use writing and the grading thereof as a factor in the evaluation of student work. The services provided by the Writing Support Services can be utilized by all undergraduate and graduate students who feel they require further assistance.

For more information go to <http://www.ucalgary.ca/ssc/writing-support> or <http://www.ucalgary.ca/pubs/calendar/current/e-2.html>

Using any source whatsoever without clearly documenting it is a serious academic offense. Consequences include failure on the assignment, failure in the course and possibly suspension or expulsion from the university. Visual art projects submitted for course credit must be produced by the student specifically for this class. Students must not submit projects if credit has or will be provided for it in another class. This includes re-worked assignments from previous or concurrent courses, unless permission is provided in writing by the instructor. Additionally, the student is asked to be mindful of using visual sources from the internet, ensuring that that material is not derived from any on-line or other available source, and that appropriate copyright permission is granted, when required.
